'Right-wing' does not describe the IPA. John Roskam
- 4 Heritage through property
After being heritage listed, private property rights exist in name only. Louise Staley
- COVER STORY
- 6 Planning Restraints: A plague on wealth and the democratic process
Economic planning has been discarded with the death of communism. Why then do new planners flourish?
Alan Moran
- 9 Victoria: A state on the move with the Ying and Yang
We know how well Victoria is doing and a well-funded ad campaign keeps reminding us. Mike Nahan
- 11 Life in the Farce Lane:
The stead creep of regulatory burdens
Politicians fear large scandals, not minute inconveniences. Yet regulation is built up from minutiae. Nicholas Gruen
- 13 Charity can begin again:
Resolving the uncertainty of 'charity'
Charity needs a concrete framework to flourish. Ross Fox
- 15 Kim and Capitalism
Looking for signs of hope in North Korea. Ari Sharp

What can we learn from six years of salinity hype?
Jennifer Marohasy
- 20 Latham, Weber and compassion
Latham is a case study of what happens when a politician has lots of passion, but little sense of responsibility.
Scott Hargreaves
- 22 Federalism and the High Court:
Fixing the appointment process
The High Court's appointment process is not protected from the increasingly centralist tendencies of the Federal Government. Amber Agustin
- 26 Food manufacturing facing the wall
The sector faces the same challenges and the same gloom as 5 years ago. Ken Phillips
- TECHNOLOGY
- 28 Media needs major reform, not minor tweaking
Proposals for media reform are same old same old. What is needed is massive radical deregulation. Chris Berg
- 31 Fashion and foreign aid
A realistic look at the "digital divide". Alec van Gelder
