

BLUE SKY

Where next for workforce policies?

Thursday 7 April 2005 Sydney
Advance notice for all professionals involved in workforce regulation issues.

There can be no doubt that Australia is at the dawn of a new era of workforce policies.

Australia has no option but to adapt to a new society in which traditional employment has declined independent workers have emerged business and industry structures vary worker attitudes have changed government policy is struggling acirrt, Sydney University and the Institute of Public Affairs are traditionally at the opposite spectrums of the labour policy debate. But they have teamed up for a one day seminar to challenge the traditional and look at;

Emerging forms of business organisation
The importance and role of entrepreneurship.
The services economy. Forcing a re-think of policies.
Rights and obligations concerning work
Challenges of an ageing population.
Worker representation
Welfare to work linkages

More information available early 2005

