Professor Bob Carter

Professor Bob Carter is an environmental and climate scientist with 35 years research experience:

“Public discussion of global warming, or climate change, is based almost exclusively on the climatic record of the last 1000 years. This is an inadequate period over which to assess the magnitude and rate of natural climate change, especially in judging whether contemporary climate change is unusual.”

Associate Professor Kevin Walsh

Kevin Walsh is an Associate Professor of Meteorology in the School of Earth Sciences, University of Melbourne:

“Earth’s climate is very variable. No one doubts that it has changed substantially in the past. The real question is whether the causes of those changes are similar to those changing the climate today – because there is little doubt now that the climate is changing.”
